

The Beaufort International Film Festival Celebrates

Story by Mark Shaffer

The numbers – all of them records – preface the story: 16 thousand tickets sold, four days and nights of screenings, each screening averaging over 300 people with more than eighty filmmakers and attendees representing 33 states and half a dozen nations. Now, here's the real story: this is one of the top 20 film festivals on the planet and it all takes place on one screen, under one roof, on an historic college campus backing up to the Intracoastal Waterway in a theater that seats less than 500 people.

“We had a lot of new faces from a lot of new places this year,” says Ron Tucker. “And it all started with a rocket launch of an opening gala.” And yes, it was a record crowd packed into the
